DESCRIBE THE PRESENT AND ORIGINAL (IF KNOWN) PHYSICAL APPEARANCE

The Newnam Funeral Home is the occupant of one of Easton's grandest Victorian structures. The building stands at the corner of Brookletts in a residential area which developed south of the Washington Street commercial district in the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. Constructed by B. F. Parlett as his residence, the house was designed by T. Buckler Chequier, a Baltimore architect whose office was located at 227 St. Paul Street.

The frame dwelling is characterized by its bold detailing and corner tower. Nearly square in plan the building is covered by hipped roof with projecting gable roofed pavillions on major facades. A one story porch crosses the front, north and south side of the house meeting these pavillions. To the east is a two story wing, part of which may be contemporary with the main house.

The Parlett House is most notable on the exterior for its tower and the porch detailing. On the ground floor the main entry is situated in the tower; on the third floor there is an unenclosed belfry with segmentally arched openings on each facade. The pyramidal roof is decorated with bands of imbricated shingles and topped with a delicate cast iron weather vane.

The west pavillion which fronts on Harrison Street is the most decorative. In the gable there is a half circle window with diamond-shaped panes. The second floor has chamfered corners, large enough to have a one over one sash window in each. The corner is supported by a single turned post and huge bracketts. There is a central window, facing west. Each window on the second floor has a one over one sash and overlight of ten small square panes filled with dark colored glass. On the first floor the pavillion also contains windows in each face; here the one over one sashes have overlights of ten larger, lighter colored decorative panes.

To the north is a pavillion also covered by a gable roof. Due to its position on the side street, Brookletts, it is simpler, but has windows similiar to those on the west bay. Small dormers facing this street have simple tracery windows. Finally the south pavillion facing the side yard is quite simple.

The wide porch is covered by a shed roof which follows the contours of the house. The posts are similiar to those on the pavillion described above, but larger and elaboratly turned. The balustrade has plain balusters in the lower one third and a large handrail. Most interesting, however, is the three-dimensional decoration below the porch roof: bulky wooden globes are suspended below the frieze.

The main entrance door is reached by climbing a flight of steps which runs parallel to Harrison Street. The door itself is of golden oak and leaded glass. The small-beveled clear glass panels, thirty of them, are complimented by the six small wooden panels below. The entry area is tiled in terra cotta and white.

Recent alterations include the north side entrance, conversion of a portion of the south porch to an office, and covering the building with wide aluminum siding.

The interior is grand and ornate: the mantle in the main room is of white marble, deeply carved; others are of marbelized slate with Baltimore or Latrobe stoves of cast iron.

Window and door trim is symmetrically treated with deep, sharp reedings. A great deal of brass hardware remains.

The stair, centrally located behind the tower, is remarkable. The closed string-course has circular inset decorations. The balustrade is composed of quarter-round openings, each filled in with three turned balusters.

Other interior details include wide sliding oak doors and plaster bracketts in door openings.

BUILDER/ARCHITECT

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The Newnam Funeral Home is notable for its architecture. A late nineteenth century building, it has the free use of decoration and irregularity so favored during the period. The interior is one of the most intact and representative Victorian domestic interiors in the town.

With its attractive tower, boldly detailed porch, the old Parlett House is an interesting contrast to the delicately detailed Chaffinch House (T-34) across Brookletts Street.

The builder, Mr. Parlett, was a prosperous Easton merchant.

The Newnams, Maurice Jr. and his wife Lillian acquired this property in 1953 from H. Burrus Atkinson. It is presently owned by Maurice Newnam III who is continuing to run the funeral home. The property, as sold by Mr. Atkinson, comprised Lots 38, 39, 40, and a part of lot 41 of Earle's sub-division as laid out in the plat of the sub-division. Arthur Grace had bought the house and premises in 1919. It was from his estate that Mr. Atkinson was able to acquire it. Mr. Grace was deeded these lots and the house from the estate of Charles A. Chipley in 1919. William Adkins, Trustee for Mr. Chipley's estate, held the property from 1909 (with the confirmatory deed in 1919 from George Nickerson). George Nickerson had acquired the premises from Benjamin F. Parlett and his wife in 1907 for $8000.00. Parlett had put his property together in three deeds. This house and lot is concerned with the first deed when he bought Lots 38 and 39 of Earle's sub-division from Robert Todd and Lot 40 from John Earle in 1891. The partial part of Lot 41, he added in 1896. Mr. Parlett built the present house.
